CENTER FOR RESEARCH INFORMATICS

Julissa Acevedo

Julissa is the CRI's Business Systems Analyst. She is the point-of-contact for all REDCap inquiries at the University of Chicago, and has personally assisted many of the 2,100 users in 1,700 different projects. In addition to advancing knowledge of the consortium at the University of Chicago, she attends REDCapCon annually to collaborate with other REDCap experts.

Brian Furner

A graduate of the College, Brian has been a part of the University of Chicago community in various capacities since 1993 and with the CRI since its creation in 2011. As Director of Applications Development, Brian oversees a team of developers who are responsible for providing custom software solutions to the BSD research community.

Michael Baltasi

Michael joined the CRI in 2014, bringing an extensive background in financial analysis, corporate management, and higher education administration to the position. Michael is responsible for planning and oversight of the CRI's financial and administrative functions. He oversees the CRI's project portfolio, coordinates activities across service areas, and provides a full range of financial and strategic support.
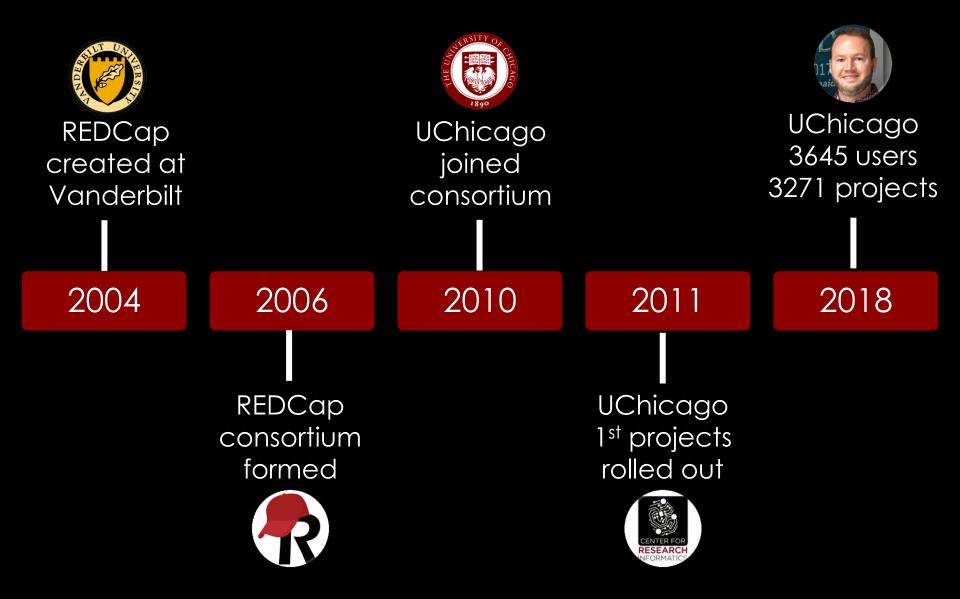

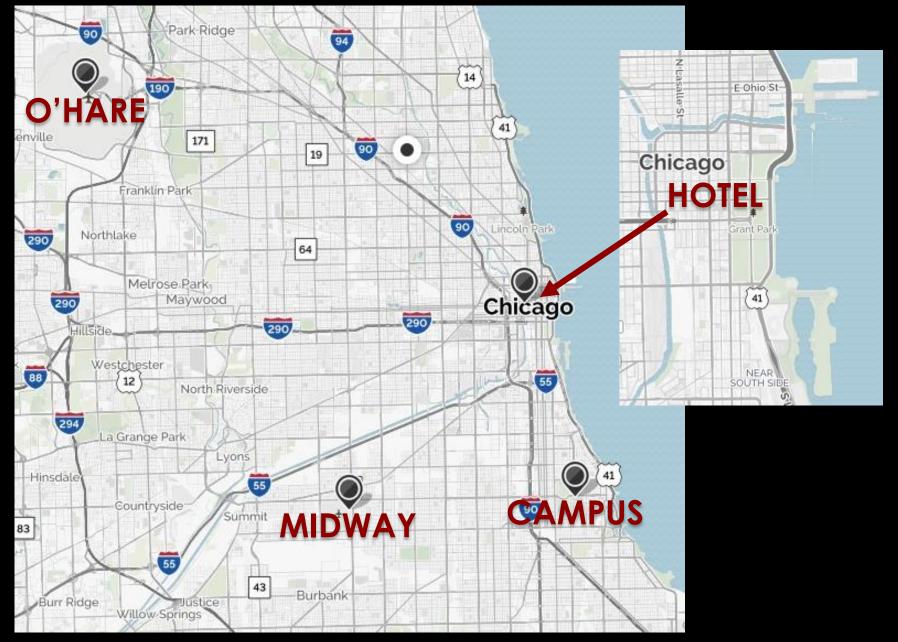

Dr. Sam Volchenboum

Sam has been a part of the CRI since May 2012 in his role as Associate Chief Research Informatics Officer, leading faculty outreach and education efforts. As CRI Director, he now leads our operations and strategic planning. Sam also serves the Department of Pediatrics as Associate Professor, is an Associate Director of the Institute for Translational Medicine, and is a Faculty Fellow in the Computation Institute.
